FOR FANS OF: BON IVER, PHOEBE BRIDGERS
AND GREGORY ALAN ISAKOV

CURRENT CAMPAIGN

Florrie Ransom kicks off her third E.P campaign with first single; 'The Last Living Apple Tree' out 24th April 2026. A buoyant indie-folk song with an apocalyptic twist, in which she laments the the problems today's world faces and how it feels to be a musician in a world of AI.

Based on the South Coast, Florrie follows the success of her last single Say When - featured as track of the week on BBC Introducing - with her long awaited EP Ley Lines; written and self-produced in the summer of 2025. The 4-track EP combines traditional folk with modern, alternative elements to create a unique and compelling sound, her lyrics exploring the relatable and familiar thoughts and experiences of a young woman at the start of adulthood.

GENERAL BIO

22 year old singer/songwriter, Florrie Ransom, fully composes, performs and produces her entire discography herself. Drawing influence from Bon Iver, Ben Howard, Phoebe Bridgers and Laura Marling, Florrie combines indie-folk with modern, alternative songwriting to create a unique and compelling sound. Her intimate live performance style has captivated audiences across the south. With soulful vocals and powerful lyricism, Florrie Ransom orchestrates a haunting and emotive performance. Since her debut EP, Incurable Affliction, in 2023 she has since released a second called By Design in 2024 with tracks from both EPs being featured on BBC introducing. 2024 also saw her first festival appearances at Haslemere Fringe Festival and Icebreaker Festival. In December 2024 she released a Christmas single; a beautiful and nostalgic cover of I'll Be Home for Christmas with an original B-side, Wait For Me Outside. This single gained momentum after featuring as track of the week on BBC Introducing in it's first week since release, leading to 3 radio interviews and a live performance of the song on Lucy Ambache's afternoon show on BBC Solent. She kicked off 2025 with a new single, Say When, which was also track of the week on BBC Introducing for the second consecutive month. Having headlined Icebreaker Festival in February 2025 and playing at Victorious Festival in August she hopes to continue this success this year with her third EP Ley Lines. The first single, The Last Living Apple Tree was released in April 2026 and was chosen as track of the week on BBC Introducing - her third consecutive release to achieve this. The second single from the EP is coming soon.
